No worries Mate! That is one of the iconic Aussie phrases. It depicts their laid back lifestyle and their optimistic outlook on life. Like Australians, we maintain a positive outlook on our deputation ministry in spite of all the inherent difficulties such as life on the road in a lagging economy. One thing we are sure of is this: If God has opened the door, then He will make a way through. We firmly believe that God has already prepared those who will provide our support.

We approach the transition from part-time deputation to full-time deputation in June with excitement. Graduation from Arlington Baptist College is only weeks away. Beyond that, we will continue in our jobs for another several weeks to build up a meager cash reserve, and then we will travel to Ohio to spend much of the summer there fulfilling appointments. What a privilege and honor it is to share with other churches our vision and our burden for people who need the Lord.

We have already had opportunities to present our field to churches in our area. We have seen first-hand how God's people continue to strive for world outreach even in difficult times. There is an apparent resolve and an urgency among God's people to reach the world in these last days before His coming. It is further evident that difficult times only serve to strengthen God's work.

Even though the Australian outlook is positive, the spiritual climate is not. Please pray with us that Australians will embrace the Gospel message.

We have a website which we feel is the most effective means of communication and contains much more information that can be put in this letter. Please visit the website at <http://dawsonfamily.webs.com>.
